V-COMM aids Barthco Move in Newark

Cranbury, NJ, March 1, 2005 – V-COMM, a leading New Jersey based telecommunications engineering firm successfully oversaw the relocation of the Newark office of Barthco, an international logistics systems company. With offices around the globe, Barthco’s needs include “communicating with the world” which made this move a challenge. V-COMM served as project manager, ordering all necessary phone services and supervising the transfer of telephone lines.

“It is a fact that communication is critical in an international logistic company. We succeeded in ensuring that the relocation of the Barthco office was as seamless as possible with as little interruption to service as possible,” said Dominic C. Vilecco, president of V-COMM.

“V-COMM was instrumental in making this massive relocation a success,” said Denis Colgan, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of Barthco. “Overseeing the entire communications portion, V-COMM was able to establish service to our new location without incident.”

Coordinating with building maintenance, V-COMM ensured proper placement of phone lines throughout the facility and managed the final cut0over for the system.
